Are We Listening?: Making Sense of Classroom Behaviour with Pupils and Parents (Paperback)

By Jackie Ravet

Institute of Education Press, United Kingdom, 2007. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. All teachers come across children who prefer to play, chat, daydream, disturb others, or wander around the classroom rather than getting on with their work. Although this may seem fairly trivial and controllable, research indicates that persistent disengagement of this kind creates stress for teachers, and causes pupils to underachieve. Are We Listening? offers practicing and student teachers valuable insight into the dynamics of disengagement in primary classrooms. It describes the results of a study into pupil, teacher and parent perceptions of disengagement that reveals the chasm between how teachers generally interpret and respond to pupil disengagement and the meanings and understandings the pupils and their parents have of the same behavior. Small wonder that teachers interventions so often fail to address the issues the pupils consider crucial, undermining their effectiveness and perpetuating cycles of disengagement. But what if we conceptualize disengagement as the survival strategies that pupils and teachers use? This would provide a framework for exploring and understanding responses to learning and behavior in primary classrooms in a positive, constructive way that is grounded in subjective perceptions. It opens the way to...
