Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Since humans walked upright, talked, and thought conceptually, we have tried to explain, floods, famines, lightning, thunder, earthquakes, stars, planets, the moon and sun, birth and death, the good and bad among us, and beginnings and endings. Subscribing to the maxim that ontogeny recapitulates phylogeny -- children assign human qualities to teddy bears, dolls, their kittens and puppies, Big Bird and Barbie, so too our ancestors ascribed gods and spirits to all things real and imagined, next, gods for all reasons, then special gods for special seasons, gods with human attributes and around 5,000 years ago, one different god for different people -- one for Orthodox Jews and one for Jews wearing black hats and pigtailed, one god for Catholics, another for Protestants, one for Methodists, and one for Southern Baptists, one for Sunnis and one for Shi'ites. Meanwhile circa 1473 AD, Copernicus exposed, and Galileo confirmed our ignorance and vanities of vanities - neither humans nor the planet of their residence was the center of the universe, which in turn raised unsettling questions as to the validity of...
