Academic, collegiate, and professional, in-one institution. This has continued to be their method until the present time. Mansfield College when it removed from Birmingham to Oxford threw off all the preparatory studies and transformed itself into a strictly professional school; but it entered at the same time into such friendly relations with the university of Oxford, that it gained many of the advantages of a theological faculty, independent of, but working in harmony with, the other faculties of a great national university. The early American ministers were trained at the British universities, chiefly at Cambridge and Glasgow. When our colleges were established, they followed British models and gave theological education as well as classical education. Harvard, Yale, and Princeton had their theological professors and their Hebrew professors, and theological education was included in their curricula. Theological seminaries as such belong to the present century, and they have had their chief development in America, in connection with zeal for denominationalism and the desire to perpetuate the tenets of certain parties in the churches. It is significant from this point of view that the first theological schools established in America were the result of religious controversy. In 1782 the Associate, Presbyteries and the Reformed Presbyteries united in the Associate Reformed Synod. But there was a considerable number who refused the union. Some of these constituted the Associate Synod and organized a theological school at Beaver, Pa., in 1794. The Associate Reformed Synod founded a theological seminary in New York in 1804.
